RON'S TIRE: 10,000 REWARDS POINTS WINNER

Surprising Rewards

SUPPOSE someone set up a bank account in your name and deposited $100,000 into it, all without telling you anything about it.
You'd be rich, right? But if you never knew about the account, you wouldn't get any benefit from it.

That scenario played out at Ron's Tire, a Quincy, Illinois, Tire Pros dealer with three locations. Ron's Tire became an IPG Member began receiving IPG Rebates checks in 2011. But owner Greg Andresen didn't know his stores were also racking up IPG Rewards points.

That all changed about two years ago at an ATD Dealer Council meeting. "They started explaining the IPG program," Greg recalls, and he was surprised to learn he would earn IPG Rewards points for every dollar spent on qualifying products from AutoZone, his Major Account Supply Partner.

"I asked, 'How do I get on that program?' and they said, 'You're already on it."

But the surprises didn't end there. "They told me how to activate my account," Greg said, "and when I logged on we already had more than 100,000 points!" He realized then that Ron's had been earning IPG Rewards points for nearly three years.

Greg's next step was to figure out how to spend his newfound booty. One day, he happened to be out in the shop and noticed one of his mechanics checking for air-conditioning leaks the old-fashioned way, by injecting dye into the system. "Isn't there a better way to do that?" he asked.

The mechanic explained that, yes, the dye process could be eliminated altogether by using an electronic leak detector instead. "But they're kind of expensive," he said, "and we've just never invested in one."

Greg decided to use some of his IPG Rewards points to purchase a Mastercool Electronic Leak Detector but couldn't find it in the IPG Rewards Gallery. However, "I remembered they said we could get anything we wanted with those points," he said, "so I called IPG and told them what model number we wanted.

"They called me back and told me how many points it would take to get one, and I said, 'Well, shoot; no more than that is get me three of them and I'll put one at all three stores."

IPG quickly arranged the purchase and the leak detectors were delivered to each of Ron's Tire three locations. "Now we use the leak detectors to find the air-conditioning leaks," Greg said, "instead of having to shoot the dye in and have the customer bring the car back later."

Even after his recent purchases, Greg says there are still more than 100,000 points in his Rewards account and the total is growing fast. "With the new AutoZone Tire Pros program I now get two rewards points for every dollar we spend," he explained.

We asked Greg what he might do with his burgeoning pile of points. "Oh, we'll figure out something we need one of these days—or something I want," he said with a laugh.
